

Hernán Cortés: The Fearless Explorer

Hernán Cortés was a brave Spanish explorer who lived a long time ago. He had an adventurous spirit and was curious about new lands.

Fun Facts:

He is famous for leading an expedition to a place called Mexico, which was far away from his home. Cortés loved to learn about different cultures and meet new people. He was known for his determination and courage.

Timelines:

1485 Hernán Cortés was born in Medellín, a town in Spain.

1504 He traveled to the newly discovered island of Hispaniola (now part of the Dominican Republic and Haiti) in the Caribbean.

1519 Cortés led an expedition to Mexico. He and his men arrived in the city of Veracruz.

1521 After many challenges and battles, Cortés and his allies conquered the great city of Tenochtitlán, which is now Mexico City.

1522 Cortés was named the governor of New Spain, which included Mexico and other lands he had discovered.

1547 Hernán Cortés passed away in Spain, leaving behind a legacy of exploration and adventure.

Hernán's Impact on the World:

Hernán Cortés's journey to Mexico was full of excitement, challenges, and important events that shaped the history of both Europe and the Americas. He showed that with bravery and curiosity, anyone can explore the unknown and leave a lasting impact on the world.